Growing interest in Salesian Spirituality

Over the last number of years "Salesian Spirituality," first articulated by Francis de Sales and Jane Frances de Chantal, has attracted renewed interest in English-speaking countries. Theirs has been called a "spirituality of the heart," and their prayer style has been dubbed intuitive, simple, spacious but unified and holistic.<sup>1</sup>

Much of this growing appeal for things Salesian, at least in the United States, has grown out of the efforts of the Oblates of St. Francis de Sales.<sup>2</sup> In recent years they have set up the "International Commission on Salesian Studies," and have offered courses in Salesian spirituality at Allentown College of St. Francis de Sales, in Pennsylvania. In Stella Niagara, New York, the Oblates' "DeSales Resource Center" maintains a consistent collection and acts as a distribution center for Salesian publications, both in print and audio-visual media. Under the leadership of Fr. Joseph F. Power, OSFS, DeSales Resource <sup>2</sup>The Oblates of Saint Francis de Sales were founded in Troyes, France, in 1871 by Father Louis Brisson (1817-1908). Fr. Brisson sent the first Oblates to the USA in 1893.

Center sponsored the “Salesian Conference” in 1983, an initiative that promoted the spirituality of Francis de Sales and Jane Frances de Chantal, and which developed into an annual event.

In 1992, the Oblates in Washington, DC, established the “De Sales Center for Lay Spirituality” at De Sales School of Theology. This resource center was set up in response to Pope John Paul II’s apostolic exhortation “Christifideles Laici,” as a way of sharing the Salesian spirit with the laity. The Oblates have also collaborated with other American groups associated with the spirit and charism of Francis de Sales and Jane Frances de Chantal, notably the second federation of Visitation Monasteries in the United States,<sup>3</sup> and the St. Francis de Sales Association.<sup>4</sup> Through jointly sponsored workshops, publishing ventures and other initiatives dating back several decades, a veritable “school of Salesianity,” has begun to grow on American soil.

In India, the Missionaries of Saint Francis de Sales<sup>5</sup> launched a periodical as the Salesian Journal of Spirituality in 1988, which changed to Indian Journal of Spirituality in 1990.<sup>6</sup> They have also established a publishing house in Bangalore known as SFS Publications, through which they diffuse excellent translations of Salesian classics and promote original research in English and a number of Indian languages. They explore ways of deepening dialogue between European and Asian religious traditions through Francis de Sales’ approach, and host an annual conference on Salesian spirituality.

This new awareness of Salesian spirituality is good news for Don Bosco’s “Salesian Family.” Don Bosco himself was attracted to Saint Francis de Sales for his pastoral charity. And though Don Bosco himself seems to have had more <sup>3</sup>St. Francis de Sales founded the Order of the Visitation of Holy Mary in Annecy (then part of the Duchy of Savoy and host city for the Catholic diocese of Geneva) on June 6, 1610. The first Visitation Monastery was founded in the USA at Georgetown, in Washington, DC, in 1799 by Fr. Leonard Neale (cousin of Archbishop John Carroll and later his successor as Archbishop of Baltimore) and Alice Lalor.

<sup>4</sup>Originally known as the “Daughters of St. Francis de Sales,” this lay association was founded in Paris on October 15, 1872, by Canon Henri Chaumont (1838-1896) in collaboration with Mme. Caroline Carré de Malberg. The first American member, Delphine Madill (born 1905), joined in 1931, and succeeded in establishing the group in the US by 1952. In 1980, the US group petitioned the Holy See to admit men as members, and the name was officially changed to the “St. Francis de Sales Association.”

<sup>5</sup>The Missionaries of Saint Francis de Sales were founded in Annecy (birthplace of Francis de Sales) in 1838 by the priest Pierre-Marie Mermier (1790-1862). Within five years of their foundation, Fr. Mermier petitioned the Holy See to send missionaries to India., where the first MSFS arrived at Visakhapatnam by 1845.

<sup>6</sup>Actually, this Indian journal went through a number of name changes during the first three years of publication. For sake of clarity, we will cite this periodical throughout our bibliography as: Indian Journal of Spirituality.

of an “affinity” with Francis’ style than a “dependence” upon his writings, he did propose the saintly Bishop of Geneva as a model of apostolic holiness to his co-workers, and these would develop a stronger attachment to the patron’s teachings with time.<sup>7</sup>

Don Bosco’s successors stressed the point that there was a charismatic link between the Salesians and their patron, and they must, therefore, meditate on his example and live according to his teachings. “We, who should not simply be content with bearing his name, must also live his spirit,” Don Bosco’s second successor, Paolo Albera, wrote in 1921. “Considering events in the light of Providence, we understand that Don Bosco’s mission in our own days is a reflection, or better, a continuation of that mission begun more than three centuries earlier by Francis de Sales.”<sup>8</sup>

On the academic scene, Don Bosco’s Salesians have studied St. Francis de Sales’ spirit, but most of their work has been in languages other than English. Pertinent to our own topic, however, the Salesian Pontifical University in Rome has been instrumental in presenting two comprehensive bibliographies of works by and about the saint: a project that represents 100 years of effort.

Two Comprehensive Bibliographies

Forty years ago, Fr. Milan St. Ďurica, SDB, compiled an extensive repertory of writings about Francis de Sales, basing himself on an 1881 listing of Latin and French works published by Canon Vincent Brasier for l’Académie Salésienne of Annecy, and an unpublished exercise developed by Enrico Morganti, SDB, for the Vatican Library that updated Brasier’s index until the year 1943. This appeared in the journal Salesianum in two installments beginning in April 1956,<sup>9</sup> which were reprinted as a single resource later that year.<sup>10</sup> St. Ďurica listed the titles in his polyglot bibliography as they had appeared chronologically. The more he worked with Brasier’s and Morganti’s bibliographies, the more defects he found, and the work seemed to snow-ball. In the end he found a total of 1299 entries published from the death of Francis de Sales until 1955.

Twenty-seven years later, Salesianum published yet another international bibliography. This was the work of Józef Struś, SDB, who took a different approach. First of all, he included translations of Francis de Sales' own writings. Then he presented the studies and commentaries by topic rather than by chronology, listing each entry alphabetically by author within the topic group. His bibliography, published in 1983, listed all published materials by or about Francis de Sales from the publication of St. Durica's repertory in 1956 until 1982.<sup>11</sup>

Toward Identifying an English Corpus

The scope of the present work is less ambitious, but hopefully will provide a tool for English-speaking students of Salesian ministry and spirituality. Aware of a growing list of resources in English, my first thought was to gather data on as many titles as could be found for the benefit of my own students in 1993. In so doing, I began to find many lacunae in the earlier lists. By 1994, I had identified a little over 50 English titles that had not been cited in the two earlier bibliographies published by Salesianum. Together with new titles, I had amassed a list of 186 books and articles.

The experience of searching out these titles reminded me of the stories I had heard about the "Forty-niners" who prospected in the California mountains during the 19th-century. They followed every lead, picked and dug until they struck gold, then after exhausting the minerals in one vein, moved on to pick and dig again. Working with library card catalogs, both traditional and those accessible through the internet, I have come to the point of exhausting the "vein" of Francis de Sales titles registered by the US Library of Congress and held in the major university libraries in this country. This has yielded a discrete "English only" bibliography of over 500 entries. Now seems like an opportune time, therefore, to publish these findings.

Following the advice of Józef Struś, my own director during my student days in Rome, I begin by listing English renderings of Francis de Sales' own writings. These are listed according to the order that they appear in the critical editions of his works, the so-called "Annecy Edition," published at the end of the 19th and beginning of the 20th-centuries.<sup>12</sup> Translations of each work are then presented chronologically within the group.

Commentaries or studies on individual works, such as the Introduction to the Devout Life, or the Treatise on the Love of God, are listed under the title of the original work. Then, following the practice of D. Struś, other studies and commentaries are presented by topic, with entries listed alphabetically by author.

The present bibliography lists all pertinent data with regard to journal articles (volume, issue, page references, etc.). Books and articles were tracked through bibliographical tools such as “books-in-print” listings, periodical indexes, “Library of Congress” entries, and library catalogues. Whenever feasible, I visited university libraries or archives and personally browsed through books and articles thus located and verified or corrected the data I had compiled through the above instruments of research.

A number of scholars and friends have helped and guided me in this work. I wish to thank Fr. Joseph F. Power, OSFS, who first broached the subject of updating the earlier bibliographies with Salesians in Rome and in Berkeley, and who has given important suggestions to me over the past three years. Thanks also to Fr. Józef Struś, SDB, who guided me in method and sources, and first suggested an “all-English” approach. Berkeley professors Arthur J. Lenti, SDB, and Mary Treacy, FMA, were not only enthusiastic over this bibliographical mining operation, but also directed me in my “prospecting,” helping to bring to light the existence of many “rich deposits.” And finally, Alexander T. Pocetto, OSFS, corresponding over the internet from Allentown, gave valuable insights on ways to make the bibliography more “user friendly.”

Parameters of Present and Future Work

There are other benefits to a simple listing such as this. For one thing, the array of titles and topics gives us an insight into the aspects of Francis de Sales’ teaching and life that have appealed to English-speaking readers over the past 383 years since his An Introduction to a Devout Life first appeared in Rouen. What are the scholarly articles? In what ways was Francis presented in the popular

<sup>12</sup>The British Benedictine, Henry Benedict Mackey, Canon of the cathedral of Newport, began to publish the critical edition of the complete works of St. Francis de Sales in 1892. He worked from the oldest archival documents collected both in Annecy and the Vatican. This series, known as “the Annecy Edition,” would finally be completed in 1932 with the publication of the 26th volume (the index, vol. 27, was published in 1964): Œuvres de Saint François de Sales, Évêque et Prince de Genève e Docteur fe l’Église, Édition Complète, 27 vols. (Annecy: J. Niérat, 1892-1964), often abbreviated as: OEA.

press? How have the titles and topics changed since he was declared patron of journalists in 1923, and what topics have emerged since Vatican II?

The purpose of any bibliography is to alert readers to resources available for deepening their own studies. This list contains writings by or about Francis de Sales and his spirituality that have appeared in English, beginning in 1613 and ending with 1995. All entries, both scholarly and popular, describe print media: books and articles from journals, newspapers, magazines and scholarly compilations. Encyclopedia and dictionary articles, as well as book reviews, do not appear among the entries. Audio-visual presentations (tapes, cassettes, slide montages, filmstrips, videos, CDs and CD-ROM) are not listed either. These are areas that need exploration for a future Salesian bibliography, as does the whole field of the Internet and the World Wide Web.<sup>13</sup>

Understandably, many of the books and articles listed here are not universally available — books are out of print; journals and periodicals are not kept for long periods of time by local, community libraries; publications from overseas may not have made it to the home port. It has been suggested that this bibliography note libraries and resource centers where the reader may be able to have access to each entry. Another suggestion was that each entry should be followed by a brief digest of its contents. Due to the problems described above, it has not been possible to carry out either suggestion for the present printing. I would launch an open invitation to the readership of the Journal of Salesian Studies to inform us of gaps and inaccuracies so that, perhaps for the year 2002, the fourth centenary of Francis de Sales' episcopal ordination, we can present the English-speaking world with as complete a bibliography as possible.

*St. Francis de Sales
on the subject of the heart*

To love God above all things:
by nature our hearts incline to this.
On God's part,
this need to love is the crook
by which God can gently hold us and draw us to himself.
